Holcomb: Abortion the 'most divisive issue'

BY BOB DEMAREE

The Indiana Economic Development Corporation brought its meeting to Madison on Thursday, giving Gov. Eric Holcomb a chance to enjoy one of Madison's economic development success stories — the Historic Cotton Mill building that has been transformed from a run-down and unused industrial site into a Fairfield Inn & Suites by Marriott.

"This hotel has come a long way since my days (as a student) at Hanover College," said Holcomb, noting it wasn't hotel then, but an empty building that was deteriorating. "To see it now, it's a true gem."

Holcomb gave credit to the work of former Mayor Damon Welch and current Mayor Bob Courtney.

Holcomb called Courtney a "true friend of the state of Indiana and the IEDC," noting that Courtney understands the importance of partnerships and building together with others. "He takes the call and a lot of good comes out of it for the state of Indiana."

Courtney returned the praise to Holcomb, saying, "You have been a friend and a champion of everything Hoosier related, specifically Madison," later

Neal, 90, recalls early years on Miss Madison crew

Bob Demaree

BY BOB DEMAREE

Being part of the Miss Madison Racing Team during its early years is a time in life that Bob Neal will always cherish and considering Neal's longevity that is saying a lot.

Neal, now 90 years old, joined the crew with Miss Madison's second boat back in the 1960s.

"My late wife and Bob Humphrey's bowled together, and Bob was on the crew, and Jean (Humphrey) asked my wife if your Bob would like to get on the Madison crew, and she said, 'I don't know,' so she told me about it, and I said, 'I sure would.' "

That was the beginning of Neal's time as a crew member in the 1960s mostly during the years when Buddy Byers was driver.

Miss Madison Racing was established in 1961 when industrialist Sam DuPont donated his hydroplane, known as Nitrogen, to the citizens of Madison. When the original Miss Madison was destroyed in a racing accident, DuPont in 1963 sold his second boat, Nitrogen II, to the city for $5,000.

Many of the crew members were business leaders in the community. Three of the crew members had their own business — Bob Humphrey with Auto Electric, Bill Schnabel with Schnabel's Jewelry Store and Ben Schnabel with Schnabel's Meat Market. Graham Heath, who in the 1960s worked as a mechanic at Risk's Garage, also later owned his own business.

Ben Schnabel also served terms as County Auditor and County Assessor, and on trips to race sites Neal said Schnabel was charged with the bookkeeping duties. "As far as rooms and food, they paid for that. Ben would keep track of that."

Voris faces additional drug charges

BY THE COURIER STAFF

A month-long investigation by Madison Police has led to the arrest of Tamara S. Jones Voris, 48, Madison, for allegedly dealing methamphetamine.

Tamara S. Jones Voris

Anthony Thurman Turner

Madison Police Detectives Kyle Cutshaw and Ricky Harris, and Patrolman J.D. Sweet, led the investigation which led to search warrants and arrest warrants for Dealing Methamphetamine-two counts, both Level 3 felonies.

Voris was actually arrested on Tuesday by MPD Patrolman Cameron Blankenship on unrelated narcotics related charges and was in the Jefferson County Jail at the time of the additional charges.

In addition to the deadling charges, Voris was also charged with two counts of Possession on Methamphetamine, both Level 5 felonies. She is being held in the Jefferson County Jail on a combined $140,000 cash bond.

Meanwhile on Thursday, an alleged traffic violation in the 500 block of Cragmont Street led to the arrest of Anthony Thurman Turner, 54, Madison, on drug-related charges.

After Madison Patrolmen Shelpman and Graham Heffelfinger executed the traffic stop, they observed Turner, a passenger in the vehicle, allegedly attempting to hide a crushed glass pipe. Officers seized the pipe along with a white crystal substance that tested positive for methamphetamine.

Turner was arrested and transported to the Jefferson County Jail on charges of Possession of Methamphetamine and Obstruction of Justice, both Level 6 felonies; and Possession of Paraphernalia, a Class A misdemeanor. Bond has been set at $1,500 cash.

ROLLOUT

presenting the governor with a key to the city, the fifth person so honored during Courtney's nearly three years in office.

Courtney also talked about the Destination Madison projects that is included in the Our Southern Indiana Regional Development Authority's plan for $50 million in Regional Economic Acceleration and Development Initiative (READI) funds earmarked to spur economic development projects in a five-county region that includes Clark, Floyd, Jefferson, Scott and Washington counties.

"With your investment in us, we are successfully amplifying the great history of Madison to make Madison's future brighter than ever," said Courtney. "The best indicator of progress in any community can be measured by the amount of new capital that is being attracted, and we are experiencing unprecedented new investment in new housing, new shopping, retail, new hotel, next level trails, a new Main Street vision, and along with that expanded investment in infrastructure such our airport and railroad. And we are taking Madison to new heights. We are curating the Madison destination."

The READI funds are in the process of being transferred to the regions. Holcomb said by the end of July "we'll have $200 million out the door in 14 different regions which means $300 million needs to roll out by the end of this year. And we'll be looking at a READI repeat" for another round of grants awarded to regions throughout the state. "We hope to have another $500 million. We can see what transformational impacts these dollars can have. These projects are just transforming small towns simultaneously all across the state and I couldn't be prouder." Holcomb said, "Businesses move the state, people move communities" and READI is doing in creating "community for people to not only feel good about, but that they want to stay and tell their friends about it."

After the meeting, Holcomb spoke with the media, answering questions about an upcoming special session starting July 25 in which a tax refund proposal will be considered along with possible legislation in reaction to the recent Supreme Court decision on abortion.

Holcomb said the tax refund is being considered because the state's economic health is strong and the residents are hurting. He said the state has $16.88 billion in new capital investment in the first six months, better than last year's record $8.7 billion. "The momentum that we're experiencing, we're doing more in one year than some have done in four," he said. "Because we have such strong numbers we were reporting before today already north of $1 billion in forecast revenue month by month over 11 months."

He said since that money wasn't budgeted "I want to give it back to the folks who earned it in the first place."

With plans already underway for the special session, the recent Supreme Court decision on abortion is giving states the opportunity to decide on that issue with abortions currently being legal in Indiana. "The general assembly will take up that issue," said Holcomb. "This will be a process, and I just want to say most importantly, that this needs to be a respectful and thoughtful process. I'm pleased the General Assembly has carved out enough time to do just that" so all sides can be heard.

"In my lifetime, it's the most divisive issue that we'll grapple with. I have said that I have a goal to protect life and I hope we're able to make progress on that," Holcomb said. "The state of Indiana already does a good job on a number of fronts in that regard but we can do more and I think we should do more for expecting mothers."

Holcomb said he felt the right decision was made in the recent Supreme Court decision noting it "should be sent back to states. I think we're getting a lesson on federalism and in Constitutional law." He said the law was divisive 50 years ago when Roe vs. Wade was decided so he expects that federal courts will have injunctions "that could serve to our benefit in the state of Indiana to watch what happens before we come back so hopefully those can be addressed and not drawn out."

Holcomb also talked about the decision of Andrew Forrester to leave his post as Director of Intergovernmental Affairs in the Governor's office and return to Madison to become executive director of Visit Madison Inc.

"It's bittersweet," Holcomb said. "There's no better ambassador for the state of Indiana than Andrew. He's not just good for Madison, he's been great for Indiana. I'll savor the time he sacrificed to be away from home. I knew this was a magnet for him and his young family."

Holcomb said Forrester's opportunity to serve in Madison "is going to serve the state well, so I'm happy for him and his family to have this next opportunity. He's going to leave big shoes to fill and he's universally loved across the state of Indiana. If I had a nickel for every time I heard 'Andrew was just here,' I could buy 14 Hinkle's hamburgers."

Town Council that put him in charge of all town departments except the police department. In resigning as town administrator, said he was accepting a position as project manager for a proposed 91-acre subdivision in Hanover and didn't want there to be any conflict of interest.

Mefford explained that was also a key factor in his decision to withdraw his candidacy for reelection, noting that even as he is separating his duties as clerk-treasurer from his work with the subdivision, he still thinks it's "not fair" to the town, particularly in giving 100% effort to his work for the town. Mefford said because of the good that will come to the town through the subdivision development "what I can do through that is even greater" than as town clerk-treasurer.

Mefford also said he has other projects in life that have begun to weigh on his ability to dedicate fully as clerk-treasurer. He also owns a house in Panama City, Florida, that is being rented as an Airbnb, while also being involved with other properties. "I have a lot going on," said Mefford, and he thinks that could impact his ability to fully dedicate himself as much to the town as he's done during most of his term as clerk-treasurer.

"I have really enjoyed" serving as Hanover's clerk-treasurer and working well together with the Hanover town council. He said much has been accomplished in "moving the town in the right direction."

Coby Cloud, who had previously filed for Hanover Town Council District 1 as a Republican, has now withdrawn and has been selected by the Jefferson County Republican Party as its candidate for Hanover clerk-treasurer. Jefferson County Republican Chairman Pam Crozier had high praise for Mefford's work as clerk-treasurer. "We are sorry to see him leave," she said. "We are confident that Coby will be an excellent replacement and already have support from Keith's team in the office." Meanwhile, there is currently no Democratic candidate for Hanover clerk-treasurer.

Four other candidate vacancies have also been filled by the Jefferson County Republican Party. County Council District 4, which previously did not have a candidate from either political party, now has a Republican appointee — Dwayne May. Republican Judy Smith, the current council member from the district, decided not to seek re-election. There is currently no Democratic candidate for that office.

Myron Eaglin, appointed to the Madison Township Advisory Board when Joshua Schafer was voted in caucus to Madison's City Council, is also replacing Scafer on the ballot with Schafer's candidacy officially being withdrawn.

Other Republican candidate appointments include Andy Crozier, Monroe Township Trustee and Angie Sims, Republican Township Trustee.

The deadline for submitting candidate vacancies for the general election is Tuesday at noon. Crozier said she is hopeful to fill some more candidate vacancies by the deadline. Several vacancies remain in the Democratic party and Jefferson County Democratic Chairman John Hutchinson said earlier this week he had no new candidates to announce at that time.

Indiana police set as handgun permit requirement ends

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — The repeal of Indiana's requirement for a permit to carry a handgun in public has forced police agencies to change how they handle encounters with armed people.

Republicans pushed the repeal, which takes effect Friday, through the state Legislature this spring over the vocal opposition of the state police superintendent and several statewide law enforcement groups. They argued that eliminating the permit system would endanger officers by stripping them of a screening tool for quickly identifying dangerous people who shouldn't have guns.

The change will allow anyone age 18 or older to carry a handgun in public except those with a felony conviction, who face a restraining order or have a dangerous mental illness. Supporters argue the permit requirement undermined Second Amendment protections by forcing law-abiding citizens to undergo police fingerprinting and background checks.

Without the permit requirement, police officers can no longer ask about whether someone is legally carrying a handgun or seize a person's weapon unless they have adequate suspicion that person was involved in a crime, according to state police. The agency has been training its 1,200 troopers on the legal changes and providing information to the hundreds of police departments, said state police spokesman Capt. Ron Galaviz.

"We have to go through another step or two in order to be able to run a criminal check," Galaviz said. "We won't necessarily be able to do it there on the side of the road."

At least 25 states have adopted permitless carry laws, with Georgia in April becoming the 10th state to do so in the past two years as the issue has become a national conservative cause that gun rights advocates call "constitutional carry" in reference to the Second Amendment. Among Indiana's neighboring states, Ohio, which also acted this spring, and Kentucky don't require handgun permits, while Illinois and Michigan do.

The loosening of Indiana's already lax gun laws comes just days after President Joe Biden signed the most sweeping gun violence bill in decades following a recent series of mass shootings, including the massacre of 19 students and two teachers at a Texas elementary school.

About 1.2 million people had Indiana handgun permits as of March 1, according to state police statistics. The permit law required people to obtain a license to carry a loaded handgun outside their own homes, businesses and vehicles, although people could generally carry rifles and shotguns without a permit.

State Police Superintendent Doug Carter sharply criticized Republican lawmakers during legislative hearings on the repeal, blaming "political posturing" for their push and saying that if lawmakers "support this bill, you will not be supporting us." Carter said following the state Senate vote giving final approval to the bill in March that "this adds a layer of danger to every police officer."

After Republican Gov. Eric Holcomb signed the bill, Carter said he would work toward find the best ways to "identify individuals who are not allowed to carry a firearm as defined by Indiana statute."

Rep. Ben Smaltz, a Republican sponsor of the permit repeal, said police officers were trained not let their guard down during any encounter regardless of whether the person has a gun.

"I think with the law-abiding Hoosier they're happy that we're looking out for their interests and making it easy for them to defend themselves away from their home the same way they would at their home," Smaltz, of Auburn, said.

CREW

One of Neal's special memories was a trip in 1964 to the Harrah's Tahoe Regatta on Lake Tahoe in which crew members Ben Schnabel, Bill Schnabel and Stan McKay drove two trucks west — one to haul the boat and the other with two engines, parts and tools. The interstate road system was in its infancy back then, Neal noted, so there wasn't one to Lake Tahoe. They traveled US 50 for the entire trip. Along the way, the truck with the engines and parts got a flat tire that had to be repaired, slightly delaying their arrival. But once all arrived, they stayed in Stateline, Nevada, located on the southeastern shore of Lake Tahoe. "You could cross the street and you'd be in California," Neal remembered.

Neal also traveled with the team to several other races sites including Detroit, Guntersville, Alabama and Washington, D.C. He recalled that he and Heath alone drove the team's two trucks to Washington, D.C., including a route that neither anticipated.

"I was driving a truck and Graham was driving another truck behind me, but for some reason I got off the highway and took us right downtown in Washington D.C., and Graham was about to have fit," Neal laughed. "What did you bring me here for?"

It's those experiences that Neal fondly remembers.

"I don't really remember how we did in the races," he said, adding the Miss Madison team was still working to hit its stride in those early years. However, driver Byers, the boat and crew produced consistent results in 1964 and finished second in national high point standings.

Neal, working at the time at Chain Belt in Madison — later to be called Rexnord — used his vacation time to travel to the races. "It wasn't nice for my wife for me to use up all my vacation time" going to the races, Neal said, "but she kind of understood." He married his first wife in 1951 and they were together 42 years until her death.

Neal eventually remarried. He and his second wife, also 90, have been together 27 years and both now living at the River Terrace Health Campus. On Thursday, Neal asked wife Irene if she would have been OK with him using vacation to go boat racing, and she said that she would have, noting that with her being a bowler that there have been times in her life when she traveled for bowling tournaments.

"I had a good bunch of guys to work with" on the crew, said Neal, noting each crew member had a specific role. He said Heath worked on the engines and Humphrey handled the electronics. Since Neal had a smaller body frame, he was used to "hook up the engine and propeller. You had to take the driver's seat out then crawl down underneath the steering wheel and hook up the engine to the prop. That was my job, taking care of the props and the drive shaft." He said Ben Schnabel "took care of the hull itself" by repairing any damage the boat sustained with all the other team members assists if needed.

A 1950 graduate of Vevay High School, Neal moved to Madison for work. In the 1950s, he commuted from Vevay to work at Madison Machine Products on Park Avenue, then moved after beginning work at Chain Belt. Several years later, he went to work for Clifty Engineering, run by former longtime Miss Madison Inc. President Bob Hughes, but by then Neal said he was no longer involved in racing.

"By that time they'd gone to jet engines, and I didn't know any more about that than I did than the man on the moon," Neal laughed.

Neal said he enjoyed his role with Miss Madison Racing in the early 1960s, but never imagining in those early years that more than 60 years later Miss Madison would still be competing in unlimited hydroplane racing. Even though he's no longer able to attend the races family members help keep him updated on how the U-1 Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison is doing.

He said his memories of being a part of Miss Madison Racing are special. "I never did drive a race car or race boat," he said, "but I enjoyed my time as crew member."

Don't Put Your Money Under the Mattress - There Are Other Options

"Numerous options exist for a safe place to keep your money; the secret is finding the best return without any exposure to risk." Steve Dybwad

Layin It On The Line

By Stephen Dybwad
Retirement Planning/
Wealth Management

Insulating your money against inflation, theft or catastrophe is as simple as taking it out from underneath your mattress and opening a savings account. The three most common are transactional savings accounts, money market accounts, and certificates of deposit. Two alternative accounts are high yield savings and specialty savings accounts. They all operate under the same premise: money given to the bank will earn interest.

Traditional Transactional Savings Accounts

The simplest way to store money with a financial institution is to open a traditional savings account with a small minimum deposit. If the minimum is maintained, the account holder usually avoids fees. Shop around and compare factors like initial deposit and balance requirements, interest rates, and other fees. While being highly liquid makes it easy to withdraw cash and move funds between accounts, they typically have the lowest interest rates. Accounts are federally insured through the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) or the National Credit Union Association (NCUA), protecting your savings from bank failures.

High Yield Savings Account

High yield savings accounts offer interest rates usually 20 to 25 times higher than the national average for transactional savings accounts. While potentially available at your local bank, the highest interest rates are typically offered by online banks. Electronic transfers between institutions are speedy and straightforward, making it easy to move your funds if needed. FDIC or NCUA also insures them. Keep in mind that banks offering high yield savings accounts do not typically provide checking accounts and other services like ATM cards.

Specialty Savings Account

Specialty savings accounts are specific to a particular savings goal. These include accounts you can open for children like savings accounts, student accounts, or 529 college savings accounts. Also included are home down payment savings accounts, health savings accounts, and traditional or Roth IRA's. These accounts generate interest and have either low or no maintenance costs. Be aware of strict and potentially costly regulations related to early withdrawal of funds. There are also specifics concerning who can open what type of account.

Money Market Account

Money market accounts typically offer higher interest rates than traditional savings accounts, .02% higher on average. This type of account is special in that you can write checks and use a debit card, like a checking account. However, there are limits to the amount of money and the number of withdrawals allowed. It's also not uncommon for higher minimum balance requirements and fees associated with money market accounts.

Certificate of Deposit (CD) FDIC Insured

A certificate of deposit, or CD, is an account with a fixed interest rate, term length, and maturity date. The fixed date means funds cannot be accessed early without penalty. These accounts typically pay higher rates than traditional savings accounts and are less liquid. The risk is very low, and the return is guaranteed, making it a safe place to store funds that you plan to use in the future.

Each of these accounts can help achieve your savings goals. Evaluate the pros and cons of each depending on your goals and financial situation. Be sure to explore various institutions for the best rates possible, and as always, consult a trusted financial advisor regarding any questions you may have.

Confident Shane ready to hit the water at Madison

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Jimmy Shane knew that he was toast. Despite being the fastest boat all weekend and not facing any real challenges, he knew his chances at a sixth APBA Gold Cup were over the moment that his engine died just before the start of the final heat in Guntersville, Alabama on Sunday.

H1 Unlimited rules state that any boat that goes under 80 mph during the warm-up period for longer than five seconds is instantly disqualified. So when Shane's U-1 Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison coasted to a stop less than two minutes before the start, Shane knew that he was done.

"There was nothing I could have done. That engine hasn't done that all weekend long and unfortunately, it decided to in the final heat. I knew right away it was going to be a violation, but I still wanted to try to put on a great show for the fans here," said Shane, who restarted and blew away the field in the final, only to be disqualified after the race. "I think Corey (Peabody) really deserved to win; they ran great all weekend long, and they really deserved their name on the Gold Cup. But I definitely think we made a statement of being the most dominant boat out here."

David Campbell

Fans cheer as Jimmy Shane drives the U-1 Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison to victory in Heat 2B at the APBA Gold Cup in Guntersville, Ala. on Saturday.

Rather than pout about the win or hide in his trailer, Shane came to the awards ceremony anyway and while Peabody was lifting the oldest trophy in motorsports, Shane was signing autographs, posing for photos and playing with his kids.

"It is what it is," Shane said with a shrug, then added with a vow. "We're going to show up in Madison next week ready to roll for sure. We're going to dig deep into what may have caused that mechanical issue with the engine shutdown and we'll make sure try not to happen again."

It was just the latest race victory taken away from Shane by penalty, but even the driver couldn't argue with this one. Although the rulebook leaves an allowance for the chief referee to decide whether a driver shut off the engine on purpose or if it was a mechanical issue, no ruling was made, leaving Shane on the outside looking in.

For his part, Shane insists that he did not turn off the engine on purpose and his teammate Jeff Bernard agrees. After all, Shane's HomeStreet was the clear the favorite in the final and had won races from lane three. What advantage would be gained by coasting to a stop?

"The boat went dead down there out of the blue and it's not like he was gaining an advantage," said Bernard, who drove the U-91 Goodman Real Estate/Miss Madison to a second place finish in the final. "Unfortunately the rules are the rules and he didn't do that."

Despite the penalty, Shane was thrilled with the way the HomeStreet ran. He rarely had to push the four-year-old boat and won each of his four preliminary heats with ease. Twice he took lane three on purpose and came away with wins.

Kelly ready to turn the corner after rough weekend in Alabama

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

If there was any driver who was the living embodiment of "Murphy's Law" last weekend at Guntersville, Alabama, it was J. Michael Kelly. Anything that could happen, did.

But one week later, the veteran H1 Unlimited driver is ready to put the weekend behind him and is set to attack the Ohio River course at Madison this weekend.

"It was a bummer of a weekend for sure," said Kelly, hanging out in the team's makeshift shop at Clifty Engineering on Thursday. "The sad thing was, we felt like we had finally gotten everything figured out and were running well in the final when, 'boom.' "

That 'boom' was the engine on his U-8 Miss Tri-Cities exploding right at the start of the final heat. The engine, now dubbed the "Char Burger" by the team is completely wrecked, although the team hopes to salvage parts off of it to build a new boat.

The explosion in the final heat was just the capper to a frustrating weekend for the defending National High Points Driver's Champion. The boat was down on power and nothing the team tried worked.

"We just kept changing engines, trying different things and just could not get it above 153 (mph). We even threw an engine from the (U-9 Lynx Healthcare) in there and it didn't help," Kelly said. "The funny thing is, in the final, it finally ran great. Suddenly I had an extra 20 mph and it was running smooth and then it just blew up."

Engine problems weren't the only issues that the team faced. Kelly hit a rough patch during one preliminary heat on Saturday and ripped off the front of the left sponson, necessitating a late-night fix. By the end of the race, Kelly's teammate Corey Peabody was lifting the APBA Gold Cup and Kelly was leaving Alabama fifth in points.

David Campbell

Strong Racing crew member Jeff Campbell (middle) and crew members Brian Gibb (left) and Paul Price prepare to trailer fire the U-9 Lynx Healthcare at the team's temporary shop at Clifty Engineering Inc. on Madison's hilltop Thursday.

Despite all of that, Kelly is confident that the team will be ready to go this weekend. He has had a love-hate relationship with the Ohio River in his career but is excited to get back on the water and show the hard work the team has been putting in.

"I really think that we have gotten our issues solved and we're ready to go," Kelly said. "We've been happy with the results and I think you're going to see that this weekend."

As for the Ohio River itself, Kelly has experienced a little of everything on the course during his 18-year career. He won the race here in 2014 and claimed a non-points victory on the river in 2015. He has also had his share of disappointments,

Wisdom's slam, 6 RBIs lift Cubs over Reds 15-7

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO — Patrick Wisdom hit a grand slam and a solo homer en route to a career-high six RBIs, rookie Christopher Morel had a career-high five hits and the Chicago Cubs beat the Cincinnati Reds 15-7 Thursday night.

The Cubs collected 23 hits off five pitchers, tying their season high from a 21-0 rout of the Pirates on April 23. Seven of those hits came in the eighth against outfielder Max Schrock, who allowed a two-run homer to P.J. Higgins and a solo shot to Morel.

Wisdom's slam off Graham Ashcraft capped a five-run second, and he also connected against Dauri Moreta in the sixth. It was his fifth multi-homer game. He hit his other grand slam on Sept. 15, 2018 against the Dodgers while a member of the Cardinals.

The Cubs (30-46) won for the third time in four games. The Reds (26-49) lost for the 10th time in 13 games.

Cubs starter Kyle Hendricks (4-6) pitched six innings of six-hit ball and tied a season high with seven strikeouts. Hendricks has allowed two runs in his last 13⅓ innings.

Joey Votto continued his dominance of Hendricks by hitting a solo home run in the sixth and is batting .415 (17 for 41) with six homers lifetime against Hendricks.

Ashcraft (4-2) allowed a career-high seven runs in 2⅓ innings and has allowed six runs or more in two of his last three starts.

Tommy Pham hit a three-run home run in the ninth off Cubs left-hander Brandon Hughes.

TRAINER'S ROOM:

Reds: OF Tyler Naquin (left quad strain) started a rehab assignment at Triple-A Louisville. C Tyler Stephenson (right thumb) is scheduled to take live batting practice Friday and start a rehab assignment at Louisville on Sunday. RHP Alexis Diaz (right biceps soreness) will throw live batting practice Saturday and could be activated Monday.

Levis balances NIL gains with long-term goals

BY RALPH D. RUSSO
AP COLLEGE FOOTBALL WRITER

ATLANTA — Heading into last season, the most notable moment of Will Levis' career as a college football player just might have been eating an unpeeled banana.

A year later, the Kentucky quarterback with the active and entertaining TikTok account has become an intriguing NFL prospect. That combination of personality and athletic potential has never been more valuable in college athletics.

The first year of college sports' name, image and likeness era has allowed thousands of athletes to cash in on their fame and Levis is among the most prominent. But as the adage goes: With great power comes great responsibility.

"I think if anything, NIL really helps young individuals become men and become women earlier and just make those big, adult decisions and to understand kind of how the world works," Levis told AP recently at the inaugural NIL Summit held in Atlanta.

For Levis, that has meant balancing short-term gains with long-term goals and making sure the brand he is building as a player can successfully transition into being the face of an NFL franchise.

"If you're in college, doing a million deals, who are you?" said Beth Levis, Will's mother. "Maybe you don't care. But with Will, I think that he does have a strong identity. So we have to make be careful how we navigate the waters."

The NCAA lifted its ban on athletes being compensated for use of their name, image or likeness a year ago this Friday, one of the biggest changes in the history of college athletics. It did so without detailed guidelines in place and with a patchwork of state laws leaving the market lightly regulated and lacking uniformity.

The results have been mostly positive for athletes, but angst-ridden college coaches and administrators are worried about how NIL has already seeped into and corrupted recruiting.

Levis, a native of Connecticut, said he has signed about 13 endorsement contracts over the last year, working with an agency called Athlete Advantage based in Lexington, Kentucky, home of the Wildcats. The deals include a Lexington car dealership, a national apparel brand and a race horse named Will of War from one of Kentucky's thoroughbred farms.

He said he has also turned down plenty of opportunities, too.

"With the current setup right now, we got to protect ourselves," he said. "But we need to understand how doing certain deals, how the amount of deals we do, what kind of deals, what kind of companies we're working with, how that reflects our brand and our image and the consequences that can come with that."

Even before college athletes could be paid for things like autographs, appearances and endorsements, Levis was interested in the benefits of brand management. Jim Cavale, the founder of INFLCR, a company that works with schools on NIL programming and compliance, said he first met Levis in 2018 when the quarterback was a freshman at Penn State.

"(Will) came right up to me afterwards. He shook my hand, asked me questions about what I had talked about in regard to brand building, social media, how often he should post, what he should post about," Cavale said.

Levis spent three seasons as a sparingly used backup at Penn State before transferring after the 2020 season to Kentucky.

Griner goes on trial in Russian court

BY JIM HEINTZ
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW — American basketball star Brittney Griner went on trial Friday, 4½ months after her arrest on charges of possessing cannabis oil while returning to play for a Russian team, in a case that has unfolded amid tense relations between Moscow and Washington.

The initial session of the trial, which was adjourned until July 7, offered the most extensive public interaction between Griner and reporters since the Phoenix Mercury center and two-time U.S. Olympic gold medalist was arrested in February at Moscow's Sheremetyevo International Airport.

Griner, 31, was escorted into the courtroom in the capital's suburb of Khimki while handcuffed, carrying a water bottle and what appeared to be a magazine, and wearing a Jimi Hendrix T-shirt.

Police have said she was carrying vape canisters with cannabis oil when detained at the airport. She could face up to 10 years in prison if convicted of large-scale transportation of drugs.

The state-owned Tass news agency quoted Griner as saying in court that she understood the charges against her. Asked by the judge if she wanted to enter a plea, Griner responded, "At this moment, no, your honor. At a later date," according to Mediazona, an independent news site known for its extensive coverage of high-profile court cases.

Fewer than 1% of defendants in Russian criminal cases are acquitted, and unlike in U.S. courts, acquittals can be overturned.

Jimmy Shane, driver of the U-1 Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison, signs autographs after the final heat of the APBA Gold Cup in Guntersville, Alabama on Sunday.

out of four heats total and we got zero points in the final heat, and we're still the points leader. So that's a great sign for the rest of the season," Shane said. "We're looking at all positives, and we're going to continue to stay positive and the boat's in absolute perfect condition. So we'll get that little bug figured out and we're going to take Madison by storm this weekend for sure."

Making the penalty easier to swallow was the fact that it was Peabody who claimed the victory.

The U-9 Lynx Healthcare driver lost his father Allen in early June and everybody on the circuit was rooting for him to pull out the win.

"Cory has done so well so fast. Reminds me when I first started, and I'm really proud of them," Shane said. "It's great to have that trophy forever. I would have loved to have my name in there for the sixth time, and I think we had the best shot out of everybody to do it. And fortunately, it's racing and things happen and you gotta take it."

The Miss Madison Racing Team will campaign two boats on its home waters for the first time ever and Shane is excited about the possibility of a 1-2 finish. And he knows that he and Bernard have the boats to do it.

"Madison is our hometown race even though the boats are out in Seattle. But there's a really good reason for them to be out in Seattle right now. And I think you're gonna see why they're in Seattle right now because of the facilities and the support that we have out there," Shane said. "It's really why we've been able to set ourselves up to run two boats. It's been a long-term plan leading up to this season and Jeff comes in second in the Gold Cup is a proof of that long-term plan. I want people to understand that we do have a plan, there are plans in place within this Madison Racing Team, and they're all for the benefit of the city and for the team as a whole. And I think you're gonna see this weekend, all come to fruition and come together."

including last year when a vicious spin in the first turn damaged the boat enough that it was forced to withdraw.

"The Ohio River. Man, it's a tough course," Kelly said with a smile. "I've had my share of success here and I've also had some tough races. Last year, for whatever reason, I just couldn't get through turn one. Hopefully, the water levels lower this year, the course won't be as rough and we can have a better time."

This weekend will also mark the debut of H1's new format, a hybrid dual and heat race which will be run on Saturday with a more traditional heat-style race on Sunday.

From what he can see from the format, Kelly likes it and is looking forward to giving it a try.

"I'm for anything that will help the sport. If this helps bring excitement and brings in more fans, I'm all for it," Kelly said. "I think this format could be exciting and I think there is a chance that it might open up the sport to other, smaller race courses. If we could do that, that would be great."

Weather and river conditions look to be ideal this weekend for the 70th running of the Indiana Governor's Cup. The H1 "Showdown" race will be held on Saturday with two sets of preliminary heats and a final on Sunday. Tickets are available at the gates and the action can be viewed live on H1's YouTube channel or can be heard locally on 96.7 WORX Radio and worxradio.com.

Grateful future mom worries about baby shower

AMY DICKINSON ASK AMY

Dear Amy: After many years, and with the help of prayers and science, I am pregnant and — along with my family and friends — looking forward to a celebratory baby shower.

My issue is whether I must invite a narcissistic sister-in-law (my brother's wife), or if it is appropriate to only invite her daughters, ages 10 and 14.

Over the years my relationship with my SIL has deteriorated to the point that she refuses to speak to me, and we have to have separate family holidays.

I would never invite this person to any event, but her daughters and I maintain a loving relationship.

From your perspective, is it appropriate to address the invitation to my nieces alone? I would really miss their presence, but cannot stand the thought of their mother attending this special day.

— Finally Expecting

Dear Expecting: From my perspective, it is not appropriate to invite your nieces to your baby shower without also inviting their mother — but I am not living in your family and lack specific insight. (Your brother might offer you a firm suggestion.)

Understand that if you invited your nieces (and not their mother), there is a high likelihood that their mother would not let them attend without her. Additionally, you doing so would likely hand your sister-in-law more "evidence" of whatever crimes against the family she believes you have already committed.

I'm only suggesting that you be prepared for fallout, no matter what course you take.

Narcissists have a grandiose notion that the world revolves around them, so your sister-in-law would interpret any action of yours only in relation to her.

I'm accepting your assumption that things are so bad between you two adults that you consider them intolerable, but understand that as you move forward — now with a child of your own — this practice of celebrating separate holidays, etc., will become even more complicated.

Social media brings a honey into the house

AMY DICKINSON ASK AMY

Dear Amy: I was married for 46 years to a man who probably shouldn't have been married at all. He was not affectionate, even during sex, cheated on me at least once and wasn't in love with me.

He passed away in 2021, disabled and bedridden. I was his sole caregiver for 10 years.

About four years ago, I casually friended a man on social media. We are both in our 60s. He has shared that he is in an unhappy marriage. He says he stays with her because there's a slim chance he could come into some money.

His financial situation is bad, and he knows mine is.

He lives three hours away. We message several times a week. He started out calling me "hon" or "honey" and on occasion "sweetheart." He ends each message with a heart emoji. He has told me if he was financially stable, he'd race to meet me.

He mentioned recently that when he was between marriages, he'd met a woman online and had traveled to meet her.

That's when a bell went off.

I have already made clear to him that I will not do to another woman what was done to me. He's not going to divorce his wife. He still wants to meet up, but I have no desire to drive such a distance just for lunch, nor to have him come here.

He seems like a nice person. He's never made any off-color remarks or suggestions.

Am I reading more into this or is he?

Do I just abruptly stop messaging him, or should I continue with very "vanilla" messages until any interest is gone? — Wondering why

Dear Wondering: According to your account, a bell went off when you learned that this man raced to meet a woman he'd met online when he was in-between marriages. He wasn't married at the time, and so he wasn't cheating on anyone.

Maybe your bell went off because you learned that you weren't the first woman this man had befriended online.

ASTROLOGY

ARIES (March 21-April 19):— You are most likely prepared to be practical. At this time, you might notice opportunities to make sensible improvements in your life. Think things through and avoid acting on impulsive decisions today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20):— Breaking up may give you the freedom to explore other options. A friendship may run its course and come to an end. Just because neighbor or friend has something you admire does not mean you need it too.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20):— Say what you mean and mean what you say. Your search for the right words to describe your ideals can make you more aware of what you believe. You can develop keen insights and understanding this weekend.

CANCER (June 21-July 22):— You may think that bigger is better and start dreaming of having more space. Overcome a loved one's objections by listening to their wants and needs. An impulsive word or deed can put a solid relationship in a tailspin.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22):— Look where you are going to avoid an obstacle. You may be too wrapped up in your own interests to pay attention to someone else. Pay attention to the local discussions because you may hear something of value.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22):— Worrying about something that may never happen only poisons the present. A wise person might give you sound advice that offers you a different viewpoint. A quiet discussion can relieve you of anxieties and insecurity.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22):— Enjoy the known and beloved. You are most comfortable with familiar people and things and may be at a loss when you encounter the unpredictable. Find a quiet place to retreat where you can meditate and get in touch with yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21):— If you are truthful with yourself, you might realize that you have little reason to criticize someone's decisions. A conversation can clear up your doubts. Enjoy outings and gatherings that center on family and friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21):— Honor traditions and follow the rules. A partner or loved one might have clear-cut reasons for doing things in their own way. You can certainly express your opinion but please avoid confrontations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19):— Serendipitous circumstances could bring you the knowledge you need to pull things together. Unexpected changes within the home or family could put you in an awkward position for a short while this weekend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18):— You may be briefly fired up by the latest cause and glad to lend a hand at a charity event or fundraiser. You may take rules and regulations seriously, making it difficult to relax and socialize in a new environment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20):— A romantic partner can give form and substance to your imaginings. Under some conditions, you can be impulsive this weekend, so you should avoid making big-ticket purchases unless they were part of a pre-existing plan.

ASTROLOGY

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Enjoy a day off to be festive but be wise and discreet. Differing opinions can create discomfort among friends and family, so stay away from explosive topics. Focus on the positives that are worthy of celebration.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Introduce some fun new convenience or novelty to your friends or family today. Community gatherings could be on your calendar – find the blessings that all can agree on and toast to the holiday.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Even a July 4th party might yield some wise advice. Using someone's sensible business tactics may offer you an acceptable way to avoid a costly situation. Check your inbox so you don't miss a crucial message.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Take the high road and do what is right. if faced with a choice between two evils. Someone might disagree if the fine line you must walk seems almost invisible. Be willing to forgive an impulsive action.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Turn a problem into an asset by being creative and determined to succeed. Use your resourcefulness to beat out the competition. A network of friendly contacts can be a valuable resource. Enjoy a celebratory get-together.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Your brain may be firing on all cylinders. Sharing your numerous interests can make you a hot prospect on the social scene. Your unique perspective may encourage someone to resolve a troubling issue and be more present.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Your loyalty might be impressive but during family gatherings you may still need to reassure a partner. A loved one might seem unpredictable or overly sensitive. Start conversations with those who share your interests.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Celebrate the red, white and blue, and enjoy some fun time off. Your mind may jump from one subject to another today, give more details and backstory if someone seems to find it difficult to keep up.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — You don't need to have the biggest part to make a great impression. Your family members may surround you with an abundance of affection no matter what part you play. One thoughtful gesture can pay big dividends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Grab the ball and run with it. Make your project a success by demonstrating plenty of determination and persistence. Despite any temptations, do not waver in your commitment and support of loved ones or family members.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Join the party. Your beliefs may not be shared by all, but you can still enjoy good times with people you care about. Sometimes it's just fine to go along to get along. Table any debates for another time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Joys shared are doubled. Someone might invite themselves along to a local outing or community activity. Use your practical expertise to prevent a family member from being carried away by a poorly understood or impulsive scheme.

Durant asks for trade from Brooklyn Nets

BY TIM REYNOLDS
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

Kevin Durant may be taking his quest for more titles elsewhere.

Durant has requested a trade from the Brooklyn Nets, according to a person with direct knowledge of the decision that undoubtedly will have teams scrambling to put together offers for the perennial All-Star.

The Nets have been working with Durant to find a trade partner, and he has multiple teams on his preferred list, according to the person who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity Thursday because neither the player nor Brooklyn revealed any details publicly.

ESPN first reported Durant's trade request, citing Phoenix and Miami as two of his preferred destinations. The bombshell came just hours before the NBA's free-agent period for this summer was set to begin.

The news also came exactly three years to the day after Durant announced that he was joining Brooklyn in a social-media post — a move that came June 30, 2019.

Durant is a 12-time All-Star, four-time scoring champion, three-time Olympic gold medalist and two-time NBA champion — those rings coming with Golden State, the team he was with before joining Brooklyn. He has four years and nearly $200 million remaining on his contract, which means that it may take a haul of players, draft picks or possibly both for a team to acquire him.

Durant has played 14 seasons, not including one year when he sat out while recovering from a torn Achilles. He has averaged 27.2 points in his career — over that span, only LeBron James, at 27.3 points per game, has averaged more.

And even at his age — Durant will turn 34 on Sept. 29, around the time training camps open this fall — he is still one of the best players in the game, his 6-foot-10 frame making his jump shot almost unstoppable by any defender.
